

ST. JOHN OBJECTS.

He Won't Match Gaudaur to Row John Teemer.

SEVERAL KISS THE BLARNEY STONE

The appearance of John A. St. John caused a very large ripple in aquatic circles yesterday. This very game and honorable sportsman stopped over here yesterday to meet John Teemer, with the object of making a match between the latter and Jacob Gaudaur. Teemer didn't meet St. John at the depot and St. John stopped over a few hours at a hotel.

In the meantime a representative of THE DISPATCH met Teemer at McKeesport and the local champion signed a copy of articles that in all respects were fair. The second article, however, caused objections from Mr. St. John. It stated:

"John Teemer shall have the authority to name the course of the first race and shall name the course four weeks before the date of the first race."

The balance of the articles provided that each race shall be for $500 a side, and that Gaudaur shall have the choice of the course for the second race. If a third race was necessary the contestants could toss a coin for choice of course.

TEEMER MEANT BUSINESS.

Of course Teemer accepted Gaudaur's challenge to row two miles, three miles and six miles. The hitch occurred, however, when St. John, in behalf of Gaudaur, not only wanted the distance but wanted the course.

The writer represented Teemer and objected to St. John's demand, but the latter very gentlemanly and business-like said:

"We know the man whom we are going to row and we want the two-mile race to take place at St. Louis. We mean that and until I see Gaudaur I cannot say anything different to this. We may decide to row Teemer one race, a three-mile race, but we will certainly have to toss for choice of course in a race like that. Most assuredly we will row Teemer three races, but only with the proviso that the first race takes place on our course. A match well made is half won and I'm not dealing with the world to be made a mark of. Teemer's articles are all right, but we want a little change. That is all there is in it. When we go home we may come down a peg or two and make a match with Teemer. He is a good rower and has been honestly beaten by O'Connor and I think Gaudaur can beat both Teemer and O'Connor. On my honor as a gentleman Gaudaur lost at least $1,000 in stake money against O'Connor at Princeton. I know that I lost money against Teemer and I know 'job' when I lose. I like to see rowing, and I have a few dollars that I am always willing to put on what I think a good young rower. I have."

LOST ON GAUDAUR. And I have lost on Teemer and I'll put up a stake for either man if I think he can beat the other.

"I am of opinion that O'Connor, Gaudaur or Teemer can beat any of the Australians. I figure on Teemer's record, and most assuredly he had a struggle to beat Gaudaur on the Thames. However, I like rowing and I am willing to stand a little longer by Gaudaur. If Teemer will row him a two-mile race at St. Louis we will row a three-mile race on Teemer's course."

As stated above St. John is a gentleman in every sense of the word. He read the articles prepared by Teemer and legitimately objected to them. But Mr. St. John, though impressed with the sense of not having a first-class man should ask everything, "a gentleman and a true sportsman" he says. "Why we don't want to row Teemer's way." This is all right, but logically and in a true sportsman sense, Teemer has the best of the argument. He will concede a match with Teemer, and take choice of course. Surely this is fair and

PINKERTON'S PULLED.

The Chief of the Big Detective Agency is the Hero of a Very

LIVELY RIOT IN OPEN COURT.

He Attempts to Illegally Arrest a Man

BUT IS CALLED DOWN BY THE JUDGE

CHICAGO, March 28.—William A. Pinkerton was the chief participant in an exciting court scene this afternoon, and as a result is now under bond. The trouble arose over an attempt to escape by an illegally arrested prisoner of the Pinkertons. Edward Zeisler, the prisoner, was afterward set at liberty by Judge Algeid on a writ of habeas corpus.

Zeisler has an office at Washington street, and does business as the "European Bond Company." He was charged by the Pinkertons with being a fugitive from justice from the State of Pennsylvania. Superintendent Robertson, of the Pinkertons, got a warrant and himself made the arrest, instead of utilizing a regular officer.

"Where's the return on this warrant?" asked Justice Brayton, when the prisoner was arraigned.

"I put it on the back," replied Superintendent Robertson.

"I see," said the court slowly; "but I didn't permit you to serve the warrant. 'Is that so,' exclaimed Robertson. 'I thought you did.'"

"Then I'm not legally arrested?" asked Zeisler in excitement.

"No," responded the court.

Zeisler made a jump for the door. A constable was there before him and barred him. Zeisler rushed into the ante-room and made for the other door leading to the court.

Court was still in session and the utmost confusion ensued. Robertson's superior, William A. Pinkerton, made a rush for Zeisler. The latter's son, a muscular young fellow, grabbed Pinkerton by the throat and choked him until his tongue protruded.

Three or four other friends of Zeisler made for the door and attempted to clear a way by a rush through the half-dozen constables who blocked their passage. The rush was successful and Zeisler, the elder, got into the hallway. At this moment Pinkerton pulled away from young Zeisler, and with a heavy blow struck the latter in the face, knocking him down.

ARRESTED AT LAST. Then grabbing the warrant from the court's desk, Pinkerton broke through the constables and, reaching the rear door, rushed out of the building, shouting to a constable with whom he was acquainted: "Serve this warrant quick; don't let him get away!"

The constables seized the warrant and, showing it under Zeisler's nose, mumbled a few words and Zeisler had to submit to arrest. The constables seized the warrant and, showing it under Zeisler's nose, mumbled a few words and Zeisler had to submit to arrest.

When a measure of quiet was restored a warrant was issued to young Zeisler, charging Pinkerton with assault. The detective was at once arrested. He promptly gave bonds for his appearance. This was followed up by the younger Zeisler petitioning Judge Algeid for the father's release. After a hearing the judge ordered the prisoner's release on the ground that a case had not been made sufficient to hold him under the laws of Illinois. Zeisler is said to be wanted at Scranton on a charge of embezzlement. He claims to be innocent.

Out and In Again. L. A. Marx was released from the penitentiary yesterday morning and was locked up in the station in the afternoon. He had come to a saloon with some friends and became involved with a new with the proprietor. He was held until his companions were found.
